

Matt Stimson

Lead Vocals

This man not only takes advantage of all the clichés in rock, he cheats on them and doesn't make them breakfast in bed. With an instinct that backdates jellyfish this comparison of his persona is no reflection on his intelligence, he is a fluent linguist dont you know. It helps when you're the vocal portrayer of the bands music. The cheek of this man is unreal, unreal enough to front a rock outfit. Last in, first out. All the chicks, all that jazz. He deserves it, it comes with the job. We will happily leave it to you, the man with the voice.

Darren Clarke

Guitar

Plays six heavy strings, guitar yes. He believes in keeping it simple, pure, less is more. A lover of music, a collector of music and a strong influence/player in Reeper. Working together is key, two guitars need to be careful, he is never short of rhythmic ideas to keep things fresh. The tone is clean, clear and powerful. The laid back blues lover, who just enjoys every second, much like a stopwatch. Make that note count, why play one thousand right notes when you can play one really well placed wrong one?

Ant Fox

Guitar

He's a guitarist. He plays the low slung Burns into a Marshall and has fingers that you can't buy in the shops. An accomplished player of the self taught fashion, plays the good way - his way. With sound out there on it's own he fills out Reeper like a mid fit tank top. Providing a canvas for the band to paint on and one for himself to destroy with a barrage of speed, delicately tinted with chorus.
